Typically offered: As NeededCJ-4001 Special Topics in Criminal Justice: Trial Advocacy (3 Credits)*Requisite(s): CJ-1020Typically offered: As NeededCJ-4003 Topic: Wrongful Convictions (3 Credits)

The United States has 6% of the worlds population and 25% of the worlds prisoners. One percent of the American population is currently incarcerated or on parole. This matter of great concern has garnered media attention in recent years owing to advances in forensics that have exonerated people falsely accused and convicted of serious felonies, typically murder and rape. This course will examine some of the legal, ethical and sociological implications pertaining to this issue. A variety of provocative questions will be considered. What constitutes a fair trial? What is the role of the plea bargain in sentencing today, and to what extent does the plea bargain circumvent the right to trial by jury? To what extent are confessions coerced? What political and economic factors influence mass imprisonment in America today?

Typically offered: As NeededCJ-4004 Topic: Criminal Investigations (3 Credits)*Typically offered: As NeededCJ-4005 Topic: Patterns in Crime (3 Credits)

Patterns in Crime is a special topics course that will introduce the student to fundamental techniques and practices used by crime analysts and profilers. This course provides an examination of the intersection between culture, crime, and social control. We will explore crime in the context of contemporary society defined by mediated images (e.g. film, television, comic books, etc.) and the increasing commodification of violence (e.g. tabloid justice). With a focus on aesthetics, we will explore styles and symbols of culture and assess the criminalization of subcultures (e.g. graffiti writers, biker gangs, youth culture, etc.).

Typically offered: As Needed

CJ-4009 Topic: Sex Crimes and American Justice (3 Credits)Requisite(s): CJ-1020

This course will focus on the history and current responses to sex offenses and sex crimes in the U.S. criminal justice, legal, and mental health systems. We will examine issues relating to sex offender treatment and management, as well as recidivism. We will also examine sex offender reform efforts, and examine the history and context of sex panics in U.S. history. Additionally, we will be exploring current initiatives and laws aimed at addressing and curbing sexual violence. In particular, this class will examine the impact of the public sex offender registry, implemented as federal law in the U.S. in 1996, and the enormous body of criminal justice and social science research analyzing the registry that has emerged as a result. The class will involve lectures, discussions, and guest speakers and experts from the fields of law, criminal justice, and psychology. We will also address current debates surrounding responses to sex crimes and sex offenses on American college campuses as well as issues of sexual harassment in the workplace. This course will also be part of the American Studies minor.

Typically offered: As NeededCJ-4010 Topic: The Death Penalty (3 Credits)*Requisite(s): CJ-1020

The United States is the only constitutional democracy that retains the death penalty as a criminal justice penalty. While there is growing pressure from other democracies and allies to abolish this practice, support for the death penalty remains strong. This course will examine the realities surrounding the implementation of the death penalty in the United States, including growing awareness of wrongful convictions that result from a flawed and imperfect criminal justice system (as of 2017, there have been almost 2000 people exonerations). The course will analyze theories and approaches to death penalty by researchers and scholars, in the fields of both law and social science. We will focus on the history and current manifestation of the death penalty, public attitudes and support, methods of execution, how capital cases are processed in the criminal justice system, the use of DNA evidence and new technology, the impact of race and class on trial and penalty outcomes, and the effectiveness of the death penalty to reduce crime. Each student will complete a comprehensive research project on the death penalty that will include an in-depth case study of a wrongful conviction and exoneration of an individual sentenced to death.

Typically offered: As NeededCJ-4011 Special Topic: Deviance (3 Credits)*Requisite(s): CJ-1020

This class offers an overview of the criminological and sociological study of deviance in order to critically assess its relevance in contemporary U.S. society. We will not only learn about a variety of deviance theories, but also examine how they help explain the nature of aberrant behaviors, the actions and labeling of deviants, and the application of social control. Some of these theories will challenge or altogether refute your current framework of thinking. In doing so, you will be asked to consider the complexity of defining deviance, the role that society plays in assigning this designation, and the various systems of social control that have been developed to eliminate deviance.

Typically offered: As NeededCJ-4012 Special Topic: Cyber-Criminology (3 Credits)*Requisite(s): CJ-1020

Course Description: Rapid advancements in technology and the exponential growth in Internet use have spawned a wide array of computer and technology related cybercrimes, deviant and criminal online identities, and new types of social control and enforcement responses. This course provides students with a foundational overview of the technical, social, theoretical, and legal aspects to understanding crime/deviance, victimization, and social control responses in the context of cyberspace. By exploring the threats, technologies, and participants of cybercrime and deviance and the various countermeasures used to combat them, we will attempt to better understand the theories and tools that facilitate scientific exploration of these phenomena, including the social, cultural, and legal issues created and affected by online crime and social control responses.

Typically offered: As NeededCJ-4013 Special Topic: Race & Crime (3 Credits)*Requisite(s): CJ-1020

This class is designed to provide sociological, criminological, and legal analyses of the American justice system as a mechanism for racialized social control. Problems of inequality are as old as the nation itself and inequality has had a long and stubborn life in the American experience. On one hand, ideas of race, class, gender, and orientation are human inventions. When viewed over time, these social constructions become what are referred to as the prevailing order or social structure of a society (e.g., upper, middle, and lower classes). That is, race and class become organized in ways that provide certain groups advantages at the expense of less advantaged groups. By examining both historical and contemporary topics related to race, crime, victimization, and the pursuit of justice, we will see that our evolving society in the United States has made ardent strides over time to promote equality and demonize overt and purposeful acts of discrimination. But how effective have these measures proven for providing protections and promoting true equality (e.g., use of force by law enforcement, racially representative jury trial, etc.) in practice? Does the criminal justice system actually work in a fair and evenhanded way regardless of individuals' race, class, gender, and orientation? Or, do the complex intersections of race (and gender, socioeconomic status, sexual orientation), crime, and justice really reflect how unconscious biases and more hidden forms of institutional discrimination and structural racism actually help perpetuate a system of racial caste in the United States? This class will explore these challenges in order to better understand why we fall short of achieving a truly equitable justice system.

Typically offered: As Needed

CJ-4015 Special Topic: Justice in Brooklyn (3 Credits)Requisite(s): CJ-1020

In this course, students will study the history and current realities of the criminal justice system in Brooklyn, one of the nation's most populous and most densely populated boroughs. Students will have the opportunity to observe court proceedings, hear directly from prosecutors and defense attorneys working in local criminal, civil, and federal courts, and assess the unique challenges faced by legal actors and courts in an economically, racially, and ethnically diverse urban setting. This course will also analyze the criminal justice innovations first implemented in Brooklyn as demonstration projects that have since been implemented throughout the country, including specialized drug, domestic violence, and gun courts. Finally, students will explore the collateral consequences of mass incarceration on communities and families, and gain familiarity with the efforts of local organizers fighting for bail reform, restorative justice programs, and other efforts to increase access to community justice.

Typically offered: As NeededCJ-4017 Special Topics in Cj: Serial Killers (3 Credits)*Requisite(s): CJ-1020

The purpose of this class is to provide you with an overview of the phenomenon of serial homicide and critically assess its existence in contemporary U.S. society. The course is designed to demonstrate the complexity in defining serial homicide; the role society plays in assigning this designation; and the factors that influence social and cultural representations of serial murder, criminal offending, and the ways that we define victimization. In addition to reviewing various serial homicide typologies and the nature and etiology of multiple murders, particular focus will be given to role of mass media (both news and entertainment) in socially constructing the phenomenon of serial homicide, including the killers themselves, their victims, and the law enforcement officials who investigate their crimes. By examining portrayals of serial, spree, and mass killings in entertainment and news media, we will explore how and why cultural depictions of mass murder influence our personal understandings of crime, criminality, victimization, and justice system, more broadly, in ways that diverge from objective reality.

Typically offered: As NeededCJ-4018 Special Topic: Criminal Subcultures (3 Credits)*Requisite(s): CJ-1020

This course will explore different subcultures and subcultural theories of crime. We will also conduct in-depth analyses of several distinct criminal subcultures. Finally, this course will consider the various ways in which criminal subcultures emerge, and the extent to which criminal subcultures offer opportunities to those with limited access to legitimate paths to success.

Typically offered: As NeededCJ-4019 Special Topic: the Death Penalty (3 Credits)*Requisite(s): CJ-1020 or SOC-1000

The United States, almost alone among constitutional democracies, retains death as a criminal punishment. This course examines the legal, social, and ethical implications of capital punishment in the United States, with a particular focus on Supreme Court decisions since the early 1970s. During the semester we will critically assess modern executions by identifying the (1) social factors that influence our moral our individual and collective understandings of the death penalty, and (2) the legal and empirical analyses that expose students to capital punishment as a researchable subject. Topical areas will examine the following dimensions of America's death penalty: its history, current status, public support/opposition, judicial tinkering that has narrowed the death penalty's scope, race and capital punishment, and its impact and efficacy. In doing so, we will unpack the moral complexity and ambiguities of deciding who lives and who dies when capital punishment is interpreted (in a practical and constitutional sense) and applied in practice by less than perfect humans.
