LWP-2000 Walt Whitman's America (3 Credits)

Requisite(s): WRI-1100, Optional: AMS-1001 if pursuing American Studies minor

Walt Whitman revolutionized American poetry with the publication of Leaves of Grass in 1855. This course will focus on the poetic career of Whitman, a 19th century resident of Brooklyn and lifelong devotee to American democracy. Special attention will be paid to Whitman in the context of metropolitan New York. The course will examine Whitman's poetics through interdisciplinary study. Interdisciplinary topics will include history, psychology, politics, art, music, science, philosophy, and theology. The class will listen to musical settings of Whitman's poetry and watch staged adaptations of his poems. We will discuss his love of opera and popular culture, his work as a journalist and novelist, his political activism and egalitarianism, and his revolutionary attitudes towards sex, class, and gender. We will also explore his philosophical and religious insights in the context of his work as a Civil War nurse and diarist. Field trips and walking tours will be included in the course, and students will be given the opportunity to do archival research through a partnership with the Brooklyn Historical Society.

LWP-2100 Writing and Publishing (3 Credits)

Requisite(s): WRI-1100

This course is designed to demystify the world of publishing and the life of the working writer through a series of readings and visiting professionals. Each visitor will speak to a different aspect of the publishing world, providing a survey of the profession. The focus will be paid to the intersection of creativity and commerce, where writers, editors, and publishers share their experiences finding an audience for the written word. Students will work on their own creative projects with specific assignments geared toward understanding those projects in view of finding an audience. Students will learn the processes of both the initial creative work and the editorial and critical review that goes into publishing. Students will practice thinking as both creatives and as publishing professionals, including pitching, editing, marketing, and discovering audiences. Prerequisite: WRI 1100. 3 Credits

LWP-2120 American Realism to Modernism Literature & Culture (3 Credits)

This course is designed to give students an understanding of American Literary History from the mid-nineteenth to the mid-twentieth century. As such, it begins where AML 2110 leaves off. We will begin with discussing the critique of writers of the American Renaissance and, in particular, American Romanticism. We will then discuss the rise of literary Realism and, later, Naturalism. Then, using one or two authors as transition figures, we will discuss the rise and triumph of American Modernism, with particular emphasis on the subjective narrator, and, to use Willa Cather's words, the shift away from the cluttered descriptive style of realism to the inexplicable presence of the thing not named. In the last week or so, we will glimpse ahead at what comes next and explore some definitions of Postmodernism. Reading some shorter works by later 20th century authors, we will ask how Postmodernism both continues and critiques Modernism. The course will use multiple genres of literature.

Typically offered: Fall OnlyLWP-2555 America in the 1940S (3 Credits)*Requisite(s): WRI-1100 or HON-5101; AMS-1001 for students pursuing American Studies minor.

The 1940s was a unique decade in American history. Dominated by America's entry into World War II, the 1940s were also a boom time for American creativity in the arts and sciences. During these ten years, the country saw the emergence of the American musical on Broadway, while at the movie theaters Americans watched Westerns and, later in the decade, the stylistic films noir. The first successful use of penicillin came in the 1940s, along with the launch of commercial television stations, and the shocking arrival of Abstract Expressionism. Americans listened to Big Band music, radio comedies and dramas, and Edward R. Murrows broadcasts from London during the Blitz. American Letters saw the publication of John Crowe Ransoms The New Criticism, the use of traditional forms in the work of poets such as Robert Lowell, the coming of American realism in fiction, and the staging of the stark plays of Eugene O'Neill. Using an interdisciplinary approach, this course will examine a number of American works (novels, poems, radio broadcasts, films, Broadway cast recordings) to help students come to an understand of the singular nature of the American experience in the 1940s.

Requisite(s): Any Literature (AML, BRL, DRA, ENG or LIT) course numbered, 2000 or higher

The course will provide a way of looking at urban literature as a momentary connection to the sensible and the intelligible world around us. Brooklyn is that world. As an introduction to literary themes in fiction, poetry, and film within the frame of Brooklyn, we will look into themes or motifs of works by authors and poets such as Bernard Malamud, Jonathan Lethem, Charles Perry, Colson Whitehead, Walt Whitman, Paul Auster, and David Amsden.

Typically offered: As Needed

LWP-3604 Darwin and Science Writing (3 Credits)

Requisite(s): Any Literature course (ENG, AML, BRL, DRA, LIT) 2000 or higher.

A reading of On the Origin of Species (1859, first edition, complete text) by Charles Darwin, in the context of selections from Genesis, William Paley (Natural Theology), Jean-Baptiste Lamarck, Herbert Spencer, Thomas Malthus, Charles Lyell, Alfred Russel Wallace, and T.H. Huxley. The emphasis of the course, however, is on Darwin's work, and so we will also read a very brief selection from Darwin's The Descent of Man (1871). While the course is open to all majors, it has been designed with science majors in mind (particularly biology), since they might not have a chance, otherwise, to read (in the context of the period and other writings) what Darwin and Wallace mean in saying: evolution by means of natural selection of traits and characteristics through adaptive processes. Although literary elements might be discussed, the course (having a scientific audience in mind) will focus on rhetorical devices (such as substantive and evaluative claims; ethos, pathos, and logos; enabling assumptions and addressing opposition), the elements of argument, and how one assembles evidence in making a series of claims. For their documented essay, students will be encouraged to read science papers in current journals, as well. As a naturalist, Darwin's writings offer an excellent grounding in the fundamentals of how to observe the diversity of life and how to make inferences about the origins and survival mechanisms of such.

Typically offered: Spring Only

LWP-3605 Special Topic: Story in Digital Age Literature (3 Credits)

Requisite(s): Any AML, BRL, DRA or LIT course numbered 2000 or higher, WRI-1100

How has storytelling changed in the digital age? In this course, students will explore the various ways stories are told in the digital age across a range of media. Students will also learn how to make their own digital stories. For example, we will look at/create podcasts, vlogs, etc. Students will work in and analyze various modes of written expression and oral communications in and for public settings. Students will also learn how to locate, evaluate, and effectively use different communication technologies.

Requisite(s): Any Literature course (AML, BRL, DRA, ENG,LIT) numbered,2000 or higher

A reading of On the Origin of Species (1859, first edition, complete text) by Charles Darwin, in the context of selections from Genesis, William Paley (Natural Theology), Jean-Baptiste Lamarck, Herbert Spencer, Thomas Malthus, Charles Lyell, Alfred Russel Wallace, and T.H. Huxley. The emphasis of the course, however, is on Darwin's work, and so we will also read a very brief selection from Darwin's The Descent of Man (1871). While the course is open to all majors, it has been designed with science majors in mind (particularly biology), since they might not have a chance, otherwise, to read (in the context of the period and other writings) what Darwin and Wallace mean in saying: evolution by means of natural selection of the fittest through adaptive processes. Although literary elements might be discussed, the course (having a scientific audience in mind) will focus on rhetorical devices (such as substantive and evaluative claims; ethos, pathos, and logos; enabling assumptions), the elements of argument, and how one assembles evidence in making a series of claims. (Students will be encouraged to read science papers in current journals, as well.) As a naturalist, Darwin's writings offer an excellent grounding in the fundamentals of how to observe the diversity of life and how to make inferences about the origins and survival mechanisms of such. There will be one short, analytical paper, one class presentation, and one longer (light) research paper. While the instructor will guide the class with some presentation, his aim is to have the students study the texts so as to generate meaningful and substantive class discussions.

The general aim of this seminar is to study Dante's major work: The Comedia. The complexity of the poem in its canticles: Inferno, Purgatorio, and Paradiso and its beauty, require careful and regular reading of the text along with a consideration of some major commentaries. Pope Paul IV, also a Dante scholar, at the end of the Vatican Council, in solemn ceremony in the Baptistery in Florence, had Dante Alighieri declare the Poet Laureate of Christendom. The seminar will look to understand why.

Typically offered: As Needed

LWP-4006 Willa Cather & the Politics of the Canon in Literature (3 Credits)

Requisite(s): Any 5 Literature courses (AML, BRL, DRA, ENG, LIT)

Willa Cather is considered by many to be one of America's best writers. She has a huge, dedicated following and the scholarship on Cather is immense. But she has never fit very easily into the accepted American literary canon. Part of this has to do with questions of literary genre: Is she a realist? A modernist? A regionalist? She also brings up many interesting debates around the place of biography when reading and analyzing literature. For example, what role does her sexuality play in understanding her fiction? Was she a lesbian? Does it matter? Does her gender and her sexuality have anything to do with her uneasy place in the literary canon? We will read Cather's fiction and a few of her short stories. We will also read sections of two famous biographies on Cather as well as scholarly articles on her fiction, her life and the politics of reading itself

Typically offered: As Needed

LWP-4007 Seminar: Character and Consciousness in Literature (3 Credits)

Requisite(s): Any 5 Literature courses (AML, BRL, DRA, ENG, LIT)

The Character and Consciousness English seminar offers a short survey of British novels from George Eliot (Middlemarch), Thomas Hardy (Tess of the D'Urbervilles), E.M. Forster (Where Angels Fear to Tread and A Passage to India), and D.H. Lawrence (The Rainbow). The novels are part of the literature of transition from late Victorian to early modern, and the focus of class conversation will deal with character, ethical behavior, and the question of self.

Typically offered: As Needed

LWP-4021 Sem: American Playwrights (3 Credits)

Requisite(s): Any 5 courses Literature courses (AML, BRL, DRA, ENG or LIT)

This seminar will focus on the works of Anna Deavere Smith and Moises Kaufman, whose groundbreaking plays have established the genre of documentary theatreplays created through extensive interviews with real people. What new sensibilities, insights, and techniques arise from such a process? What do we learn about our American character and identities? Among the plays to be read are Let Me Down Easy, Fires in the Mirror, Seven, The Laramie Project, and Gross Indecency: The Three Trials of Oscar Wilde.

Typically offered: As Needed

Series such as A Song of Ice and Fire by George RR Martin, Lord of the Rings by JRR Tolkien, Harry Potter by JK Rowling, The Wheel of Time by Robert Jordan, and The Earthsea Chronicles by Ursula K le Guin offer intricate cycles of hero stories. Using the scholar Joseph Campbell's work to decode mythic themes, the seminar will explore the authors' relationships with one another, the progression of sequence from one book or episode to the next, and the role of modern fantasy as a portal to the historical and mythic traditions of epic tales.

Typically offered: As Needed

LWP-4032 British Women Novelists (3 Credits)

Requisite(s): Any 5 Literature courses (AML,BRL,DRA,ENG,LIT)

The focus and emphasis of this course will fall on the character, consciousness and literary work of women writers in Britain. What does it mean to be a woman in a class-conscious society? What rights and privileges, if any, did women have at the end of the eighteenth century, during the nineteenth century, and at the beginning of the twentieth century in England? What types of domestic, social, and other constraints were imposed on women? What opportunities for love or work did women have? What choices did women have in terms of marriage and education? In addition to the seminal work about women's rights by Mary Wollstonecraft in the eighteenth century, how is it that a man, John S. Mill, comes to write The Subjection of Women (1869), rumored to have been written, and no doubt heavily influenced, by his wife Harriet Taylor Mill. In this way the course will consider the minds, manner, morals, and lives of women in England from the late eighteenth century up into the early twentieth century. Students will be encouraged to consider and discuss both sexuality and gender. Course content might vary, but authors covered may include: Mary Wollstonecraft (A Vindication of the Rights of Women), Jane Austen (Pride and Prejudice and Persuasion), Charlotte Bront (Jane Eyre), Elizabeth Gaskell (Mary Barton or North and South), George Eliot (The Mill on the Floss), and Virginia Woolf (Mrs. Dalloway and A Room of One's Own).

LWP-4035 The Anti-Hero in American Literature (3 Credits)

Requisite(s): Any 5 Literature courses (AML,BRL,DRA,ENG,LIT)

This course explores the anti-hero, the rebel, who has so completely captured the American imagination in literature and film. This is the outsider, the outcast, who struggles against the dark side of the American dream—its social inequality and moral bankruptcy, its political corruption, its economic greed and exclusion. This struggle, both internal and external, sometimes triumphant, sometimes fatal, will be illuminated in the works of Melville, Twain, Eliot, Hemingway, Anderson, Faulkner, Steinbeck, West, Ellison, O'Connor, Ginsberg, Ferlinghetti, Bradbury, and others.

Typically offered: As Needed

LWP-4036 What Does It Mean to Be a Citizen? (3 Credits)

Requisite(s): Any 5 Literature courses (AML,BRL,DRA,ENG,LIT)

This seminar will focus on answering the question What Does It Mean to Be a Citizen? In addition to selected fiction and film, texts will include Claudia Rankine's Citizen: An American Lyric, essays of James Baldwin, selections from Walt Whitman's Leaves of Grass, and a range of interdisciplinary readings that address issues at play in our current social fabric related to, among other things, the following: individual and collective identities; protest, power, and privilege; rhetoric, truth, and artistic expression.

Typically offered: As Needed

Typically offered: As NeededLWP-4412 Tutorial: Advanced Creative Writing (3 Credits)

This tutorial is a continuation of Advanced Fiction Writing and, for many, will serve as a bridge to a creative English thesis. The primary focus will be on workshoping student work. We will also read and analyze published short fiction (some chosen by me, some chosen by students) as writers as well as selected essays on craft and process. Each student will be expected to read and write about a particular issue of craft in a particular collection of short fiction that they will choose in consultation with me. We will meet as a group every other week; in addition, there will be individual consultations throughout the semester. Prerequisite: Chairperson's approval.

Typically offered: As NeededLWP-4413 Writing in the Public Sphere (3 Credits)

Course is designed to elevate a student's ability to write clear Standard Edited Written English for all college papers. The student is introduced to different composing procedures, editing strategies, and using multiple drafts during the course of the semester. Writing is taught as a continual learning process rather than just a finished product to be evaluated and graded. Students are also tutored in the fundamentals of the research process through the staged or scaffold completion of a well-informed and documented writing project. The use of library research is included in the course schedule, since students begin work on an extended writing project at the very start of the semester. Besides supporting the development of written sophistication and research competency, the tutorial aims to introduce the student writer to various strategies by having students write 4 or 5 short essays, with reflections on each piece of writing. Three credits. Prerequisites: Chairpersons approval.

Typically offered: As NeededLWP-4990 Internship in English (1-3 Credits)*Requisite(s): WRI 1100 & 12 credits from advanced level ENG courses. .Open to ENG majors only; departmental approval required.

Students may intern at approved sites under professional supervision. Internships must be approved by the department chairman and are subject to availability.

Typically offered: As NeededLWP-4995 Independent Study in English (1-3 Credits)*Requisite(s): 9 credits from ENG Dept. (AML, BRL, DRA, ENG, LIT, or WRI, except WRI-1100) and Department Chair approval.

When a student has a particular interest which is not addressed by any of the offerings in the English curriculum. When a student has been pursuing an idea and feels the need to do it on a more formal basis, it is possible to propose the idea for independent study. The student would seek out a member of the English faculty who would be willing and able to oversee or guide the student through a semester's activity on the subject. Specific guidelines for Independent Study in English are available in the English offices. Students interested in possible independent study should begin the process of securing a mentor and filling out the required forms before the Registrar's Office begins formal registration for the next semester.

Typically offered: As Needed

LWP-4997 Senior Thesis (3 Credits)

Requisite(s): 2 ENG courses 4000 or higher, and Departmental Chair's approval

A senior thesis, required for all English majors, is proposed via English department proposal format during the last semester of the student's junior year. At the same time, a proposed bibliography, signed by the English faculty member who serves as mentor for the thesis, is submitted. Thesis proposals must be approved by the English faculty. Details may be obtained in the English offices.

LWP-5401 Literature: Franciscan Tradition (3 Credits)

This Honors Seminar has the student think about Franciscan responses to the world: responses similar to or reinforced by the examined literature, particularly biographical vs. hagiographical elements in Francis of Assisi's life; the writings of Francis of Assisi and Clare of Assisi; writing about St. Francis and St. Clare; and an examination of their influence on society throughout history.

Fulfills General Education Requirement: HCE, PEM

Typically offered: As Needed

LWP-5402 American Nobel Laureates (3 Credits)

In this seminar, we will read, listen to, and view works of prose, poetry, and drama from American Nobel Laureates. Each student will explore the reasons why the Nobel Committee selected a particular author for this prestigious award. Students will also be expected to develop some familiarity with American culture and aesthetics through oral reports. Through course discussion, presentations, and writing, we will collectively attempt to articulate why certain American authors have been singled out for international literary and aesthetic fame and we will place these authors within a globalized aesthetic framework.

Typically offered: As Needed

LWP-5404 Darwin and Science Writing (3 Credits)

A reading of On the Origin of Species (1859, first edition, complete text) by Charles Darwin, in the context of selections from Genesis, William Paley (Natural Theology), Jean-Baptiste Lamarck, Herbert Spencer, Thomas Malthus, Charles Lyell, Alfred Russel Wallace, and T.H. Huxley. The emphasis of the course, however, is on Darwin's work, and so we will also read a very brief selection from Darwin's The Descent of Man (1871). Students will read (in the context of the period and other writings) what Darwin and Wallace mean in saying: evolution by means of natural selection of traits and characteristics through adaptive processes. The course will focus on rhetorical devices (such as substantive and evaluative claims; ethos, pathos, and logos; enabling assumptions and addressing opposition), the elements of argument, and how one assembles evidence in making a series of claims.

Fulfills General Education Requirement: HCE, NPW

Typically offered: Spring Only

LWP-5405 Perspectives of Gender/Health (3 Credits)

This interdisciplinary course brings together psychology and literature in order to examine how our view of the body, health, and illness are connected to changing psychosocial and political ideals. Gender, as a specific factor of these ideals, is the underlying focus of the course readings and discussions.

Fulfills General Education Requirement: HCE, NPW

Typically offered: Spring Only

LWP-5406 "Blues, Jazz, and the Harlem Renaissance" (3 Credits)

An exploration of blues, jazz, and the literature of the Harlem Renaissance. In the process of developing a stronger, more critical appreciation of these art forms, students study such legendary figures as Alain Locke, WEB duBois, Langston Hughes, Zora Neal Hurston, Louis Armstrong, Bessie Smith, and Duke Ellington. Lectures are supplemented with film, slides, and recorded examples. The class will attend live jazz performances.

Typically offered: As Needed

LWP-5407 Utopian & Dystopian Literature Literature (3 Credits)

This seminar examines representative works of utopian and dystopian literature and considers how the conception of perfect societies, and of the radically imperfect ones, illuminates our values and priorities as citizens of a society and as individuals. Such works also invite reflection on the achievements and failings of our own society. Among the readings are such works as More's Utopia, The Handmaid's Tale, Ecotopia, and excerpts from Genesis, Dante's Inferno, and Plato's Republic.

LWP-5655 Women Primatologists Literature (3 Credits)

A study of work by Jane Goodall (In the Shadow of Man; Through a Window), Dian Fossey (Gorillas in the Mist), Birut Galdikas (Reflections of Eden), Shirley Strum (Almost Human), and Karen Strier (Faces in the Forest). Students will read remarkable narratives by women scientists who endured tremendous hardships and risks to engage in long-term field studies of wild chimpanzees, mountain gorillas, orangutans, olive baboons, and marmoset monkeys. While the field research in every case began as a species study, environmental and animal welfare concerns eventually took hold as well.
